Meet Your Instructor:

Bri Wilfert

22 years of passion for dance is what sets Bri Wilfert above the rest. She has a variety of experience in the field of dance, and experience performing in many different types of shows, from small stage outdoor charity concerts to pre-professional settings. Her time studying dance at the University of Idaho expanded her knowledge as a choreographer.

Bri has taught many types of movement classes to students of all ages and levels. This drove her curiosity about movement theory, as well as her desire to study dance in a deeper capacity. Wilfert's focus in theory lead her to become a strong advocate for dance, particularly in a learning environment. Because of her profound enthusiasm for this art, she is always a helping hand with any aspect of a show.

Her ultimate goal is successful advocacy for dance in public education. She is interested in using her knowledge of movement theory to confront the issues facing our youth in education. She believes that movement in the classroom will have a direct effect on students' self-confidence, interpersonal relationships, outlook on society, stress levels, mental health, and even grades. Our knowledge of how students learn has evolved in the last 50 years, yet our education system has not, and s is here to evoke this must needed change.

Bri is University of Idaho alumnae, where she received a Bachelor of Science in Dance. She is CPR and First Aid certified.
